

United States Senate

WASHINGTON, DC 20510-1011

Good afternoon,

Today, in a U.S. Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee hearing, Senator Jon Ossoff pressed USPS Postmaster General Louis DeJoy — under oath — for specific answers and solutions to the months-long delays Georgia families and businesses continue to face getting mail and packages on-time.

During the hearing, Sen. Ossoff specifically raised that the percentage of inbound mail delivered on time has dropped to only 36% in recent months. He also pressed DeJoy for specific answers about what he and USPS will do in the coming weeks to solve these challenges.

“I’ve got constituents with prescriptions that aren’t being delivered. I’ve got constituents who can’t pay their rent and their mortgages. I’ve got businesses who aren’t able to ship products or receive supplies,” Sen. Ossoff said to Postmaster General DeJoy.

Last month, Sen. Ossoff launched an inquiry pressing Postmaster General DeJoy to provide detailed answers and explanation amid growing reports of missing and delayed mail processed through the Atlanta Regional Processing and Distribution Center — impacting families’ ability to get life-saving medicine and vital mail services, hurting small businesses, delaying absentee ballots, and more.

Also last month, Sens. Ossoff and Reverend Raphael Warnock and Congressman Barry Loudermilk (GA-11) launched a bipartisan inquiry with Postmaster General DeJoy to provide a detailed explanation for alleged fraud at the Marietta Post Office last year.
